Additional Comments

The Admission Committee looks for students who are well prepared for the rigors of college and have taken their school's most demanding classes. You should do your best in these courses because your grades are equally as important as your course selection. Most students who are admitted to Emory maintained an unweighted B+/A average in high school. We are looking for students who are committed to their schools and communities, through work, athletics, the arts, volunteering, or other interests. Emory values students who bring new perspectives and fresh ideas into the classroom. We also note the contact you have had with the admission office. We encourage you to order a complimentary Video Visit or talk with a representative at a college fair or at your high school. If you visit Emory, you can attend classes, meet with faculty, and talk with current students.

Additional Comments

Thinking ahead to college? You should consider the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Here you'll study alongside smart and friendly students from all across the country and the world--bright people who strive for excellence, support each other, and love their school. If you come to Carolina, you'll live on one beautiful, residential campus in what many believe to be the best college town in America. And you'll enjoy extraordinary opportunities--many of which rival those at schools that cost double what Carolina costs, and some of which you won't find anywhere else.
